The Optimist, published at Calgary, is one of our brightest exchanges and we welcome its visit each week. The boys are getting out an up-to-date paper and surely deserve all they get.

If a paper has 600 actual subscribers in a district and another paper has 1600 papers going to people who take an interest in the paper which is the best paper to carry an ad in? If you looked their books over and saw the actual names and counted them yourself, what would you think. The newspaper that had 1600 should win out if you want to reach the people. One man in Innisfail compared lists and found which had the most subscribers where he wanted his ad to circulate. A newspaper may claim 900 and still have only 600 that would go to the local readers as the exchange list takes up 150 or more and the foreign subscribers the balance.

MALCOLM KIRK

A Tale of Moral Heroism
In Overcoming the World.

By CHARLES M. SHELTON,
Author of "In His Steps," "Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

Copyright, 1900, by the Advance Publishing Co.

"Say, did you see Mr. Kirk?" A group of men at the postoffice, several days after the great fire, were talking it over.

"These New England folks beat every other kind when it comes to never giving up."

"Yes, or fighting the devil. Our minister beats all the rest at that," said Carver, who spoke of Kirk as "our minister," although he had never been a member of any church and rarely went to hear even Malcom preach. But it was a tribute to the hold Malcom had secured on such men that they appropriated him somehow to themselves or to the best that was struggling in them.

It was nearly the middle of the afternoon of that eventful day that the people of Conrad, exhausted, burned, blackened, saw the great danger pass around them and the galloping whirlwind thundered off beyond the town, leaving a mighty and desolate expanse of black and smoldering prairie behind it.

Then it was that the severest trial of all came to Malcom and Dorothy.

They had gone into the house of one of their parishioners, where the body of Philip Barton had been carried. He was living, but had received some injuries from falling out of the wagon probably when the team ran away.

They had come out of the house and were on their way home when some one in the street suddenly clutched Malcom's arm and, pointing through the smoke, cried out:

"Look there! The church is on fire!"

The church and parsonage stood at the opposite end of the town from the prairie fire, and the danger had been the least in that quarter. That part of the town had been entirely deserted while the fight had been going on at the other end.

"If the church goes, the parsonage will go, too," thought Malcom, as he and Dorothy ran through the street.

When they reached the parsonage, the church was the only one left.

The water of the town was exhausted. The well in the parsonage yard was already nearly empty. Malcom rushed into the house and by desperate work, helped by several other men, succeeded in carrying out some furniture and a few of his books.

One of the boxes in Dorothy's room was blazing as he carried it out and threw it over, and a pile of papers in a portfolio was scattered. Dorothy, as she worked helping to carry some pieces of furniture to a place of safety, felt something blow against her face, and, putting up her hand, she caught a piece of paper.

Even in the excitement she saw what it was. It was the sketch that Francis Raleigh had drawn on board the Cephalonia three years before, the sketch of Malcom holding the baby. Dorothy sobbed as she saw what it was. Her own baby! And now their home and nearly all the things they counted dear!

It was over soon, and in a little while the church and parsonage, the work of many a weary struggle for their little company of disciples, were dreary heaps of ruin. A hard fight on the part of the worn-out citizens had kept the other houses from being burned. The church and parsonage had stood in a large lot by themselves.

"After all," said Malcom when it was all over, as he sat down by Dorothy on a trunk while a little group of neighbors stood by discussing the incidents of the fire, "after all, dear, we have a good deal to be thankful for."

"Yes," said Dorothy, with a smile. It was a little hard for her as she sat there to imagine that Dorothy Gilbert who once back in the old New England home had been noted for the elegance and refinement of all her ways and surroundings. Nothing but the great love she bore the man who had asked her to share his life now made her insensible to that former life before she was married.

Malcom Kirk sat there gazing at the ruins of his home and his church, and deep down in his heart there was a mighty conflict going on. He had lost his books, nearly all that were of value, and the other losses were great. He was blackened and burned, his clothes hung in ragged rents about him, his great fists were bleeding, and here beside him was the woman who had left all for what? To share such privations, dangers, losses?

For a moment he hardly heard what some of his parishioners were saying. They had been talking excitedly together.

"Mr. Kirk, we are of the opinion that this fire was incendiary."

"How is that?" asked Malcom, rousing up a little.

"The first seen of it was in the tower. Now, the fire from the prairie could not possibly have caught up there. Some one must have set it."

Then different ones began to whisper their suspicions.

The next day, while Malcom and Dorothy were staying with one of the church members who took them into his home, the rumor grew that the fire was the work of the whisky men.

Down on the street excited groups of men gathered that evening, discussing the matter. Every one knew that Malcom Kirk had fought the saloons from the first day of his entrance into Conrad. He was feared and hated by them more than any one else. He had succeeded to a large degree in getting the other churches to act together in the agitation now going on all over the state. He was already noted for his leadership throughout the county and had written and spoken on every possible occasion for the proposed prohibitory amendment.

So there was reason in the suspicion held by the citizens. As the evening wore on proof of a certain saloon man's guilt seemed almost sure. Two or three persons had seen him coming out of the parsonage yard that afternoon of the fire. A child had seen the same man on the steps of the church a few minutes after Dorothy had left the parsonage.

It was now 10 o'clock. The crowd at the corner by the postoffice grew every minute larger and more threatening. Groups of men stood surrounding some speaker who urged lynching as the only satisfactory punishment for such a crime. The citizens were exasperated and nervous from the great strain of the last two days.

Malcom Kirk came down town late that night to get the mail from the east bound express and walked into the mob just as cries of "Lynch the firebug!" rose from many voices. As soon as the crowd saw him it surrounded him excitedly.

"Mr. Kirk, we've proof that 'Big Jake' set fire to your church."

Malcom looked over the crowd a moment in silence. He had not been thinking so much about the loss of his church and parsonage as he came down town as about Dorothy and his future prospects. But the sight and sound of that mob of citizens brought his mind back to the situation not only in the town of Conrad, but throughout the entire state. For the time, therefore, he let his own personal plans go as he faced the fact of a grave crisis in the temperance movement.

He had more than one Sunday evening held outdoor services at the very church. Dorothy often helped him at such services by playing and singing. Every man in Conrad was familiar with the tall, homely, awkward figure that now towered over almost every head, and every man in Conrad respected him.

There was an empty dry goods box near one of the stores, and Malcom Kirk asked some of the men to drag it out to the corner of the sidewalk. The minute he had mounted it the crowd became silent.

It is a rare gift to be able to speak to a great crowd of men out of doors and hold them. Kirk possessed that gift. His voice was a splendid instrument, and he knew how to use it. It is said of Gladstone that in the days of his greatest power as a speaker people would linger in the corridors of the house of commons when he was talking simply to enjoy the sound of the tone of his voice, although they could not distinguish a word that was said. Something of this same quality made Kirk's voice a fascination for an audience. Whatever it was it could truly be called a great gift of God.

And he used it now in a godlike manner. He began by calling attention to the fact that the people of the state were trying to abolish the saloon by legislative amendment to the constitution. At such a time as that, for the temperance people to act in a lawless manner toward even the enemies of the home and the church would be an act of folly so great that it might endanger the entire movement for prohibition.

"I am perhaps," continued Malcom, "the most interested person in this whole matter. It is my church that has been burned and my home that has been destroyed. And yet I say to you men that if you attempt to use violence toward 'Big Jake' or any other saloon keeper on the ground of this circumstantial evidence and take the law into your own hands I will defend him from such violence at the risk of my own life. Let us act like men in this matter—like men who see further than personal vengeance and are determined that our fight shall be directed not against the saloon keeper so much as against the business he represents. That is what we want to fight for in behalf of all our homes and churches and our state and country."

He got down off the box after he had spoken and appealed in a quiet but powerful manner to some of the more influential men in the crowd not to let the men act lawlessly. His speech and appeal had their effect. A small group of men on the edge of the crowd gathered farther up the street, and after Kirk had gone home they marched up to "Big Jake's" saloon, only to find it closed and the proprietor fled.

TREES FOR PRAIRIES.

Native Maple Does Not Do Well on the Plains.

One of the most interesting papers read at the convention of the Canadian Forestry Association held recently in Regina was that by Mr. Angus Mackay, superintendent of the Indian Head Experimental Farm, his subject being "Tree Planting on the Prairies." The results of his experiments, as given in his address, are that the native maple is a very unsatisfactory tree in some respects; its propensity to send out suckers from all parts of the trunk being a constant cause of trouble when grown singly; though when used for hedge purposes the suckering is an advantage. The ash may be considered one of the best trees yet obtained for the prairies, its only fault being its lateness in leafing out in the spring, and earliness in losing them in the fall. Native or American elm for street or avenue purposes are the most satisfactory yet secured, their only fault being the liability to have branches broken in heavy windstorms. Dakota cottonwood has so far proved a good avenue or shade tree on the experimental farm. This variety is easily propagated from cuttings, and, except the Russian poplar, surpasses all others in growth.

Russian poplar, which at one time gave promise of being a valuable variety for this country, has for some years been injured by a fungus disease which makes the trunk unsightly and eventually kills the tree. The native birch which grows in many sections of the prairie, is well worthy of extensive growth, both for ornamental and commercial purposes. This is usually abundant each year. The cut-leaf birch is quite hardy, and the most beautiful tree to be found in all Canada. Mountain ash which in the early years was extremely tender, is now quite hardy and at all seasons one of the most beautiful trees that can be grown. In the summer with its white flowers, or in the fall with the large clusters of red berries, it is especially attractive.

In the evergreen family, the Scotch, jack and stone pine, Rocky Mountain, Norway and white spruce, and balsam fir are the hardy. Tamarack or larch, both native and European, is hardy, also nearly all the Arbor Vitae (cedar) family, but the latter are very slow growers.

In the twenty years of tree-growing on the experimental farm, cultivation has been the main reliance towards success. With a few exceptions, water has never been used, even in the driest seasons. In all cases the land was prepared the year before planting; either by breaking and back-sowing, or by the use of fallow-cultured with either of these preparations when the trees were in proper condition at the time of planting. The last week in April or the first two weeks in May have been found the best time to plant deciduous trees. Late in May has given better results with evergreen varieties, on account of the strong and warm winds prior to that time injuring the leaves or needles.

In propagating trees from seed, maple, ash, elm and birch are the only varieties attempted on a large scale. Elm ripens its seed early in June, and should be gathered at once and sown shallow as soon as dry. The other varieties come in about the time of wheat harvest, or early in September. Ash and birch should be sown late in the fall or early spring, with no danger of being winter-killed. Maple can be sown in the fall with considerable risk of being killed, or can be sown early in May with safety. When fall sowing succeeds, as it has done for some years back, the growth of the young plants over the spring sown, is very marked. A wise plan is to sow both in fall and spring.

Farms in Clay Belt.

Hon. James S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, has returned from a trip to northern Ontario. He went as far north as Cochrane. He said that the quality of the soil along the Tamiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway is such as to warrant him in predicting that within the next twenty-five years there would be more good farms surrounding the Government railway than there are from Toronto to North Bay. Despite some muskies there is an abundance of rich clay soil, of which the town site of Cochrane is a good sample.

The experimental farm at Driftwood has made satisfactory progress in demonstrating the quality and productivity of the soil in that part of the province. Oats sown last spring have matured splendidly, and turnips, cabbages and other vegetables have yielded excellent specimens. Two acres of fall wheat sown this year are showing up well.

"While north," said the Minister, "we discussed the question of the town site of Monteith, and in all probability arrangements will be made in the course of a few days for making a survey on the opposite side of the railway from the farm buildings where a promising location is to be found."

Oldest P. S. Inspector Retires.

After holding the position of school inspector for the County of Stormont for 38 years and four months, or since the office was created, in June, 1871, A. McNaughton of Cornwall has resigned, and the County Council has appointed James Frazer, M.A., Finch, formerly of Williamsburg, for the past year assistant inspector.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson XIII.—Fourth Quarter, For Dec. 26, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. ii, 1-12. Memory Verses, 11, 12—Golden Text, Matt. i, 21—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

There is one great truth emphasized in this gospel and in the New Testament which is not made much of by preachers and teachers, as a rule, and that is that Jesus is the son of David, the promised heir to David's throne. See in Matt. i, 1; Rev. xxii, 16, how the New Testament begins and ends with this and note how Paul uses it in Rom. i, 3; II Tim. ii, 8. See Gabriel's use of it in his message to Mary in Luke i, 32, 33, and Peter's reference to it in his great Pentecostal discourse in Acts ii, 30. Then take the question of the wise men in our lesson. "Where is He that is born King of the Jews?" Remember that that title in the languages of Jews and gentiles was placed over His cross and that when He shall come again in His glory and Israel shall say, "This is our God; we have waited for Him, and He will save us," it will be to make Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, that all the nations may be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem. Then, the Lord being King of Israel in the midst of them, they shall not see evil any more, and He will make them a name and a praise among all the people of the earth. Then shall all the nations bring their wealth to Israel, even as these wise men did, and Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the earth with fruit (Isa. xvi, 9; Jer. xli, 17; Zeph. iii, 15, 19, 20; Isa. lx, 5; margin xxvii, 6). I sincerely trust that every teacher may verify what I have said by these and other texts and thus have the best possible kind of Christmas lesson concerning Him of whom the prophet said, "Out of thee (Bethlehem Ephrathah) shall He come forth unto me to be ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of old, from the days of eternity" (Mic. v, 2). Or, as it is in our lesson, "Out of thee shall come a governor that shall rule my people Israel" (verse 6). Such a king as Herod might well be troubled for the time will come when the kings of the earth and the great and rich and mighty men shall call on mountains and rocks to fall on them and hide them from His face and His wrath (Rev. vi, 15-17). The chief priests and scribes knew prophecy well enough to be able to tell where the Messiah should be born, but their knowledge did them no good, for when He came publicly and in every way proved Himself the Messiah about thirty years later they rejected Him and killed Him. It is not a knowledge of Him nor of what the Scriptures say about Him that saves any one, but only the heart reception of Him, according to John i, 12. Some day we shall know more than we can now about these wise men—who they were, how many there were, just where they came from, what they knew about Him or His star and how they came to know what they did. If the star led them all the way to His land we wonder why they turned from it to call upon Herod and inquire of him. We note that when they left Herod the star seemed to be waiting for them, for it went before them till it came and stood over where the young child was, leading them to the very house. This was therefore no ordinary star, but a supernatural light, a heavenly messenger, and it makes us more than ever interested in these men whom God so honored. When they saw the star again after leaving Herod they rejoiced with exceeding great joy (verse 10), and we do not wonder, for it must have been like passing from hell to heaven to come from such a presence into the presence of God's own messenger. When the angel brought the shepherds word the glory of the Lord shone round about them, and the message was, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." Peter says of Him, "Whom, having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see Him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory" (I Pet. i, 8).

In the presence of this child and His mother these men fell down and worshipped Him, opened their treasures and presented unto Him gifts, gold and frankincense and myrrh (verse 11). This is no loose change or pocket-book story, but a record of treasures brought to Him. It makes us think of the woman who gave all her living and received from Him such commendation and by contrast of another woman who spent all her living on physicians in a vain search for health and then received it one day in a moment from Him freely. Mary of Bethany brought Him treasure when she anointed Him with very costly ointment (Luke xxi, 8-43; John xii, 3). Are we bringing Him anything that can be compared to treasure, a really sweet savor to Him, a willingness to suffer with Him? When there is no plain guidance given us in His word He will not fail to guide us in some way by His providence or by a dream or a voice if it is necessary. Ps. xxxii, 8; Isa. xxx, 21, are sure words. I have often been helped by the fact that before they were ordered down to Egypt the gold was on hand to go with, and it was with His gold they journeyed. It had been given to Him. Notice the unexpected source it came from. Remember Hag. ii, 8; Ps. lxxii, 5.

Women's Attractiveness an Asset.

Cicely Hamilton, author of "Dian of Dobson's," the sociological play seen in New York city for a few nights last season, is about to publish in London a series of essays on woman and matrimony. In expressing her views briefly on these puzzling subjects Miss Hamilton recently remarked it was obvious the highest salaries commanded by women, except great prima donnas, were those obtained through their getting married. "As a matter of business," the playwright observed, "woman specializes in personal attractiveness, and the care, the time and the thoroughness which many women devote to their adornment is thoroughly professional and a complete contrast to their amateurishness in other respects." Miss Hamilton is strongly in favor of matrimony for women, she says. Her objections along this line are, she asserts, the difficulty many girls have in getting the right kind of a husband.

Cynicism.

All the difference between men and women is that men say what they don't mean, while women don't mean what they say.

Love is a house with many stories and to be happy one should never climb beyond the first floor.

It is one of the curiosities of sex that a woman will face any number of men boldly and quail before one woman.

Love is an easy lesson when one has a capable teacher.

No man ever remembers that which he wishes to forget.

There are never more than two people in the world at a time, oneself and somebody else.

The Badge of the Wedded.

The married women in Little Russia are always seen, even in the hottest weather, with a thick cloth of dark blue twisted about their heads. In New Guinea a young woman lets her wheeling about her as is cut short. Chinese matrons braid their hair like a helmet.

A Great Horse.

Jumbo, a horse owned by a Sarlin Rock shipbuilder, is said to be the largest horse in Connecticut and it would no doubt be safe to say the largest in New England. He is nearly seven feet high and weighs 1,700 pounds. He is a most powerful animal and has dragged with apparent ease a two ton load. With the children he is a great favorite. It costs a good deal to feed him, as he has the almost incredible quantity of eight pecks of oats at each meal and makes away with over 200 pounds of hay every week. His shoes are of unusual size and weigh four pounds each.—Boston Budget.

The Price of Peace.

The announcement that France is going to spend three milliards of francs for new ships of war—that is to say, for peace—reminds us how prices have gone up since 1871. In that year France bought peace of Bismarck for one milliard. And a milliard, furthermore, was deemed in that day a fairly stiff figure—the thrifty French more than hinted that Bismarck had driven a sharp bargain, whereas on the occasion of the present purchase the nation is reported as suite in a glow of delight.—Puck.

A grim tragedy was enacted on Christmas morning between Markerville and Innisfail, 15 miles west of here. A farmer named Johnson from near Markerville, driving towards home, where it is stated, he was to have been married met a team driven at a furious rate by two men, who, it is alleged, were under the influence of liquor. They ran into Johnson's rig, throwing him out, causing him to sustain a fracture of the spinal cord, which proved fatal on Sunday evening. One of the men named Wilson, an mounted policeman living at Innisfail, after seeing the result of the accident, committed suicide by shooting himself. The other man is believed to be near Meighen, but so far has not been located. Johnson is a widower with six small children. Wilson's wife is seriously ill in the hospital and the suicide of her husband is being kept from her.

The Carstairs Journal reports that Editor Osmond of the Didsbury Pioneer had an attack of appendicitis last week. This is strange. The first time in our memory that we have heard of an editor having anything like that. Usually its people who can spare $300 or $400 plunks for the doctors, that have, 'appendicitis.' The other people have just common 'stomach trouble.' For instance a certain doctor not a thousand miles from here used to take his patients who could afford it to Calgary hospital for typhoid fever and so on. When he had an attack of it he went to Edmonton to the hospital there. Funny world isn't it?

To discern and deal immediately with causes and overcome them, rather than to battle with effects after the disease has secured a lodgment, is the chief aim of the medical man, and Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is the result of patient study along this particular line. At the first appearance of a cold the Syrup will be found a most efficient remedy, arresting development and speedily healing the affected parts, so that the ailment disappears.

One of the greatest nuisances of travelling is tipping. A smile from a head waiter is a costly commodity, and no menial service is too small for remuneration. An unusually ingenious plea for a tip is that of a small Hibernian, mentioned by John Augustus O'Shea in "Roundabout Recollections." The author was travelling in Ireland.

I drove down to the station on the faint chance of catching the train to Dublin. When I got out of the cab at the station a bright-faced youth accosted me.

"Ah, sure, sir, you've just missed the train," he said.

It was true. I booked my luggage and ascertained when the next train would leave. While I was waiting, the lad came up to me and asked me for a tip.

"What for?" I asked.
"Sure, sir, I told you that you were too late," he unblushingly responded.

LANDMARKS OF SANDWICH.

Many Evidences of Jesuit Pioneers Still Stand.

During the recent old boys' reunion in Windsor, Walkerville and Sandwich a beautiful and suggestive pageant was enacted depicting the landing of the Jesuit Fathers Richardie and Potiers, who came in early days to establish a mission to the Huron Indians in Sandwich. The day was brilliant with sunshine, and the broad sweep of the Detroit River reflected the gladness of the blue sky and rippled in response to the summer breeze. The grassy bank and rolling meadow between the Catholic Church and the river were overrun with a company of 5,000 people, and the medley of summer attire and the variegated parasols made a scene of unusual animation. The chatter of the crowd was at last hushed and their patience rewarded by the arrival of a fleet of canoes, from which landed a company of priests in long black soutanes and broad-brimmed hats. They were set in relief by two score Indians, dressed in all the crude brilliancy they so much admire. Great, strapping fellows they were, painted and decked with feathers, beads, fringed leggings, moccasins and all that go to make up the striking costume of the redman. After scouting to see that the way was safe they fell into a procession and followed the solemn tread of the priests, who, book in hand, chanted the hymn "Vexilla Regis." They proceeded to a grassy knoll in what was the old Huron burying-ground and there planted a huge black cross inscribed with the dates 1733 and 1909.

The interesting roles of the missionaries were taken with simple dignity by Fr. Cote, parish priest of Sandwich, and Fr. Aboulin, for years in charge of the Sandwich flock, now pastor of old St. Anne's, Detroit.

This was the very spot where nearly 200 years ago the Jesuits set themselves the task of founding a church in the wild, beautiful wilderness, "Where trees," as Cadillac said, "of prodigious size grew. Trunks straight as arrows, without knots and almost without branches, save at their very tops, growing with the lustiness of centuries upon them."

In 1721 Charlevoix said: "The shores on the south side of the strait are bluffs of clay from 15 to 20 feet high, commencing opposite the foot of an island (Belle Isle) where stands an Ottawa village and continuing with unbroken front for four miles, then sinking gradually to the water's edge and ending in a crescent-shaped bay, with beautifully gravelled shores."

There the Jesuits pulled up their canoes and built the first house in Sandwich by other than savage hands. The clear surface of the river could be seen for miles from this point, while crowning the bluffs on the opposite side of the river stood the prominent bastions of Fort Pontchartrain, then swarming with French soldiers, commanded by the ambitious Cadillac, founder of Detroit.

And what is left to remind us of these bygone exploits? There is an old avenue of maple trees, familiarly called the "priests' walk," which runs from a handsome modern L'Assomption church to the river, and was formerly terminated by a huge wooden gate, which, however, has sunk into picturesque decay. To the right of this walk is an old gnarled orchard in the midst of which stands the "Presbytery," latterly called the "Old Convent," for in the early 'seventies it sheltered a company of nuns. This is the original building erected by the Jesuits. It has been patched and added to and finally moved to another part of the orchard, but still the old, old house stands, with its French roof, blind gables and wide stone chimney whitened by countless rains and dashings of sleet and snow. It has a frontage of thirty feet and was built two stories high, with an attic. The roof rose in the old French style and was pierced with dormer windows. It was constructed of square pine timbers and had a foundation of solid stone.

Just Fish.

Commissioner George M. Bowers of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries said recently in Washington of the black bass that he is sending to South Africa at the request of Col. Roosevelt. "These fish will do well, but no miracles are to be expected of them. Many persons seem to think that our bureau is as miraculous in all its works as well as the Canadian salmon."

"Two Canadians were boasting. 'Where I came from,' said the first, 'we have a salmon river that rises in some boiling springs. As the salmon climbs up the river they gradually get acclimated to the heat of the river and don't mind it. In fact, when we fish in the highest reaches of the stream we catch our salmon ready boiled.'"

"I don't doubt that," said the second Canadian, calmly. "Down my way there's a curious salmon river, too. It rises in some tin mines. As the fish work up they meet the suspended ore in gradually increasing quantities. They get quite mineralized if they keep on up-stream, so that if we fish at the head of the river we catch the salmon ready tinned, and all we have to do is to pack and ship them to market."

Clean Bread, Well Wrapped.

Everyone who makes, handles, buys and eats Bread, must realize the great danger from impurities to which bread is subject from the time it leaves the oven until it reaches the mouth of the consumer, because of so frequent, and often careless handling.

Bread wrappers were first made in Canada by The Eddy Company for Wm. Feeley, a baker in Hull, P.Q., with such satisfactory results that they have since been adopted by leading bakers of Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto and elsewhere, so that Bread Wrappers are coming into more general use.

From a clean, wholesome, sanitary point of view, the advantage of bread wrapped immediately upon being taken from the oven, appeals to every consumer as an important move in the direction of pure food.

When there are impurities in the water supply of any of our cities, the public immediately demand that the authorities do everything at any cost to prevent contamination, and to stay disease; it seems quite as important that our Bread Supply should be as carefully guarded.

Norway Elections

At the national elections just held in Norway the women, for the first time in the history of the country, were allowed to vote for members of parliament. The innovation seems to have caused little excitement, the men and women going to the polls together quietly and harmoniously. We are told that considerable delay was caused in the polling of the vote by the fact that many of the fashionably-dressed women could not find room for themselves in the little apartments in which the ballots were marked. They had to remove their hats before they could get in.

If Neglected, it soon reaches the Lungs and may Prove Fatal.

Mr. G. L. Garrow of 116 Millicent St., Toronto, writes under date of September 13, 1908: "One year ago this spring I contracted a severe cold in the chest, which developed into Bronchitis. DOVER A GREAT PORT.

A Great Deal of Work is Being Done on Its Navy Yard.

It is not generally realized that the naval harbor works at Dover have been in hand for twelve years. Dover was used as a base for the fleets which the Romans maintained for the suppression of the pirates of Northern Europe. Sir Walter Raleigh recommended Dover for development as a naval base, and Henry VIII. did much for its benefit, building a new pier there.

In more recent times Dover has been the subject of much talk and comparatively little action. Three royal commissions sat on a proposal to build a harbor there in the middle of last century—one in 1840, another in 1844, and a third in the following year. All that resulted, however, was the Admiralty Pier, begun in 1847 and not completed until twenty years after.

Many years later the Dover Harbor Board brought forward a scheme for the commercial development of the port, and their plans were actually sanctioned in 1891. Soon after, however, they were modified owing to the decision of the Admiralty to construct there a "national harbor of refuge," the contract for which was let to Messrs. Pearson & Son in 1895, and which the Prince of Wales opened recently.

The work has been a tedious one, and it is open to doubt—in naval circles, to openly expressed doubt—whether the place will ever be worth what has been spent on it. The result of the twelve years' work is a naval harbor 610 acres in extent, and a tiny commercial harbor (by courtesy) of eighty acres. The harbor is enclosed by the Admiralty Pier, 4,000 feet long, the "eastern arm," 3,320 feet long, and the detached southern breakwater, 4,200 feet long. In addition, a sea wall 3,850 feet long was built in connection with the reclamation of twenty-three acres of land at the eastern end of the harbor. During the twelve years of work, as many as two thousand men have been employed at one time.

The construction of the eastern arm and of the Admiralty Pier extension were proceeded with simultaneously. Most of the concrete blocks used weighed forty tons each, and were placed in position by powerful cranes. Three of these machines always followed each other on the works, the first preparing the sea bed, the second placing the blocks, and the third working the great diving bells for under-water work. The gantries for the crane railways were made of Australian blue-gum, specially selected in the tree by a representative of Messrs. Pearson, sent to Tasmania for the purpose. Each of the piles was about 100 feet long, and their value, when prepared, was $2,500 each.

Old Iron Ships.

Modern war vessels become obsolete with ruinous rapidity; but the mercantile marine shows many instances of iron vessels now in regular service at ages rivaling those of the ancient timber fabrics. Readers will recall the disastrous wreck of the New Zealand steamer Penguin on Cape Terawhiti; but it will surprise many to learn that this vessel was built on the Clyde as far back as 1864 by Tod and MacGregor, the historic builders of Jules Verne's famous blockade-runner. The same year saw the graceful Iona, still accounted a model craft, take the water from J. and G. Thomson's yard.

In 1853 the Lough Foyle was launched by J. Barr, Glasgow, in 1846 the Mary Jane by Tod and MacGregor, and in 1844 the Edinburgh Castle by Smith and Roger. These packets, under other and well-known names, are still in active service, and are to all appearance as staunch now as when they were launched over half a century ago, though the firms who built them have long disappeared. Steel vessels have yet to prove their relative durability, as the oldest example now running is probably the comparatively youthful and popular Royal Mail steamer Columbia, built in 1878 of mild steel from the mills of the Steel Company of Scotland.—Chamber's Journal.

A Quaint Wedding.

A quaint and pretty wedding celebrated in Trowsley, Kent, recently, was a genuine old English affair. The bride was Marjorie Nach, daughter of a retired army officer. The "bridal carriage" was a farm wagon, hung with strings of roses. There were two seats in front, and one was vacant on the ride to the church. Behind the bride were the eight bridesmaids in a double row. Three heavy farm horses, led by farm laborers in smocks, drew the wagon. On the return from the church the bridegroom sat beside the bride. Fiddlers and dancers went ahead of the bridal party, and there was a stop at the village green, where all the villagers were treated to cakes and cider. Outside the carpenter shop the bride received the gift of a wooden spoon. The village blacksmith came out in his apron and presented a horseshoe to her. She received gifts from all the shopkeepers in order through the village. Girls scattered roses in the road, and the bride and bridesmaid were in old-fashioned costume.

FOR THE PUBLIC

New Formula Cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis and Hoarseness in Five Hours

Much is being done in these days to stop the ravages of consumption, but probably nothing has been so effective as teaching the public how to break up a cold and cure coughs, bronchitis, tonsillitis, etc., with simple home-mixed medicine. A laxative cough syrup, free from whiskey is the prime need. A cough indicates inflammation and congestion and these in turn are due to an excess of waste and poisons in the system. A tonic laxative cough syrup rids the system of congestion, while relieving the painful coughing. Get the following and mix at home: One-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardiol and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Shake the bottle and take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times daily. Give children less, according to age. Cut this out and save it for some friend.

There is no other medicine for little ones as safe as Baby's Own Tablets, or so sure in its beneficial effects. These Tablets speedily cure stomach and bowel troubles, destroy worms, break up colds, thus preventing deadly croup, allay simple fevers, and bring the little teeth through painlessly. Mrs. C. A. Weaver, Saskatchewan Landing, Sask., says—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my little one in cases of colds, stomach and bowel troubles, and other minor ailments, and have never known them to fail in speedily restoring the child's health. I think there is no medicine for babies like the Tablets." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

"You display a great knowledge of Scotland, Mr. 'X,'" once remarked a judge to a lawyer, who has since held a very high legal office. "Are you a Scotsman?" "No, my lord," was the reply, "but I received a great many fees from Scotsmen." "Ah," retorted the judge, "then you are a Scotman by extraction."

Prison Statistics.

The annual report of the Department of Justice contains some interesting figures compiled by G. W. Dawson, inspector of penitentiaries as to the penitentiary population of the Dominion. There was, during the fiscal year 1908-09, a decided increase in the number of convicts from urban centres, due no doubt to financial depression and lack of employment, but for the country districts, the statistics as to criminality do not show much change. The average daily population of the penitentiaries was 1,625, as compared with 1,418 for the previous year.

The inspector, in commenting upon the fact that, by the fixed sentences system, scores of dangerous criminals are set free to again mingle with society, says: "From our experiences in the administration of penal institutions, we are convinced that society would be more adequately protected by the application of indefinite sentences to habitual offenders."

Roman Catholics in prison number 871, Anglicans 125, Methodists 173, Presbyterians 73, Baptists 73, Lutherans 15, Hebrews 15. Twenty-eight have no creed. Convicts of British birth number 316. There are 66 life convicts, of whom 33 are confined in Kingston. Ten per cent. are under 30 years of age. Fifteen per cent. are unable to read or write. Seventeen per cent. have been total abstainers, while forty per cent. have been intemperate.

The report shows a decrease in the number of pardons, and an increase in the number of convicts liberated under parole system, as 244 were liberated as against 215 for preceding year. Absolute pardons numbered 14, as compared with 29.

The assertion is made that the parole system is the most important and useful reform yet introduced, and the recommendation is made that the various provinces be requested to make provision for supervision of prisoners released on parole from provincial institutions. Only one convict escaped during the year, and he is still at large.

A Lady Gold-Digger.

Lady Sybil Grey is the latest distinguished gold-digger. She accompanied her father, Earl Grey, Governor-General of the Dominion, on his recent trip to the Canadian Arctic gold-fields. Near Dawson City, the capital of the Klondike, she pegged out a claim for herself with all the prescribed legal formalities, and christened it the "Sybil." Her first panning-out produced twenty dollars' worth of gold, which she considers a very promising start. During the long Arctic winter Lady Sybil will work her claim by deputy, but she intends, it is said, to return next summer to supervise operations and examine results in person.

Caught It Both Ways.

A former manager of the Toronto Railway Co. was talking the other day about the trouble of making connections with street cars at transfer points. He said that he became discouraged when he was manager of the road. One night he got on a King street car, and after a race up Yonge street, succeeded in catching his car.

"Why don't you fellows watch for people making connections and wait a moment or two sometimes?" he panted.

"Didn't you catch it? What the h—l are you kicking about?" was the astonishing reply, and the ex-manager did not pursue the subject further.

The Bishop and the Miner

At present, writes Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart, in the Boston Transcript, the winter highways in the Yukon valley are mere trails, traversed only by dog-sledges. Bishop Rowe, of Alaska, who is very fond of that kind of travel, one day met a miner coming out with his dog team, and stopped to ask him what kind of a road he came over.

The miner replied with a stream of forcible words, winding up with, "And what kind of a trail have you had?"

"Same as yours," replied the bishop, feelingly.

Soon after the King had passed the huge concourse of children at Moushold, Norwich, recently, a little girl was seen by her teacher to be crying. "Why are you crying; didn't you see the King?" asked the teacher. "Yes, but, please teacher he didn't see me," sobbed the little girl.

The E. L. C. will give an entertainment at the Sarcee Butte school house on Xmas eve the 25th. A good program will be rendered. Admission: gentlemen, 25c; ladies free. A box supper will follow the program.

Mrs. F. King, of Macoun, Sask., is visiting at her parent's home. Mr. and Mrs. Dawd's, Miss Gawn, who has been with her sister for some time has also returned home.

Mrs. and Mrs. J. Cook have come to reside at Ghost Pine.

Mrs. Jas. Green is visiting Mrs. S. Graham during Green's visit east. He is expected home next week.

Miss Annabell Dawn has returned home from Didsbury for the holidays.

The Red Deer farmers are mad at the city dads because said dads are passing by-laws keeping them off the streets. Now when they hit town they have to find some back alley to sneak up to tie their horses. Come to Bowden where you are as welcome as the flowers in May or June.

Bert Scott who is living in Edmonton has been blessed with a son and heir. Congratulations Bert.

Harold Pownell was married to Miss Muriel Sanders on Monday night last by Rev. Mr. Marshall, of Didsbury, at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple were the recipients of hearty congratulations from their host of friends after the ceremony.

Now the Commission of Copenhagen appointed to decide if Dr. Cook discovered the North Pole, after looking over the evidence submitted find no pole or photos of anything like a pole and think he is either an imposter or a lunatic. Nice way to treat the first man who reached the pole, isn't it? It is awful.

The Wetaskiwin Post gets out a very neat Xmas number and shows up that Wetaskiwin town in fine shape. The ads were very plentiful, too.

Our old friend T. N. Whillans, of the Toffield Standard, says lots of things about the advertisers who bring ads in on publication day and expects the poor editor to change them. And we know him well enough to know that he thinks a whole lot more things than he will print in his paper. It is what he thinks that should make the advertisers get busy and write their ads on time. Thank heavens we live where the boys bring their ads right on time.

The Manitoba government and the Grain Grower are uniting and will give the elevators a run for their money. Let Alberta get busy and see what she can do.

The Acme News is getting to be quite a newspaper and will have a first class plant after the new year. It is a live town and should have the very best.
